Indian Philosophy (or, in Sanskrit, Darshanas), refers to any of several traditions of philosophical thought that originated in the Indian subcontinent, including Hindu philosophy, Buddhist philosophy, and Jain philosophy (see below for brief introductions to these schools). It is considered by Indian thinkers to be a practical discipline, and its goal should always be to improve human life. Orthodox (Hindu) Schools. Back to Top. Indian philosophy. Quite the same Wikipedia. Just better.Ā Indian philosophy refers to ancient philosophical traditions of the Indian subcontinent. The principal schools are classified as either orthodox or heterodox â€“ Āstika or nĀstika â€“ depending on one of three alternate criteria: whether it believes the Vedas as a valid source of knowledge; whether the school believes in the premises of Brahman and Atman; and whether the school believes in afterlife and Devas.[1][2][3]. Indian Philosophy or Hindu Philosophy is generally classified into 6 orthodox schools (Āstika) and 3 heterodox (nĀstika) schools. Difference between Astik schools and Nastik schools. The basic difference between the two branches of Hindu Philosophy schools is said to be based on the recognition of Vedas. Orthodox schools recognize the authority of Vedas while heterodox schools donâ€™t believe in the authority of Vedas. Out of these nine systems, eight are atheistic as there is no place for God in them. Indian philosophy refers to philosophical traditions which developed in the Indian subcontinent. Modern scholars generally divide the field between "Hindu Philosophy" (also known as "Vedic Philosophy") and non-Hindu traditions such as Buddhist Philosophy and Jain Philosophy.[1] This division is generally derived from traditional Indian classifications.Ā The main schools of Indian philosophy were formalized chiefly between 2000 BCE to the early centuries of the Common Era.
