Library acquisitions is the department of a library responsible for the selection and purchase of materials or resources. The department may select vendors, negotiate consortium pricing, arrange for standing orders, and select individual titles or resources. Libraries, both physical and digital, usually have four common broad goals that help dictate these responsibilities. These goals are significant to libraries in order to maintain the basic principle of access. CRL is an international consortium of university, college, and research libraries dedicated to acquiring and preserving unique traditional and digital documents for humanities, science, and social science research. Membership in CRL offers libraries access to the unique collections through electronic document delivery and interlibrary loan. The question that is still being asked by many librarians and others is: What is the future of the library? Without a crystal ball, we just do not have the answer to that yet, and, since the question is rhetorical in nature, the answer will continue to elude us. Guide to Ethics in Acquisitions 2014 Provides an historical perspective on ethics related to acquisitions of library materials and gives practical examples of situations that require thoughtful consideration of ethical behavior.
