Classical legacy. Archaeology. Games and Quizzes. Pandora, the first woman in Greek myth, was created as a punishment to mankind. Her name by the way does not mean "giver of all gifts" - rather "she to whom all gifts were given" - the gods gave her beauty (Aphrodite), skill (Athena), while Hermes gave her a doglike (bitch-like?) mind and a thieving nature. "All (pantes) the gods gave her gifts (dora), a sorrow to men who live on bread." But even if Pandora had a jar and not a box, women as portrayed in ancient art are forever putting things tidily away in boxes of various kinds. There's even the myth of Danaë, where she and her son Perseus were themselves tidied away in a box and dumped at sea. Are these men, who continually hurt them, cheat and lie, truly all they deserve? All that's available? But the story does not end there.
