Coleridge: Poems. Whilst Vengeance drunk with human blood stands by And smiling fires each heart and arms each hand. Should'st thou escape the fury of that day A fate more cruel still, unhappy, view. Coleridge: Poems. Quae Nocent Docent. 1789 in Christ's Hospital book. O! mihi praeteritos referat si Jupiter annos! Oh! might my ill-past hours return again! Coleridge Samuel Taylor Poems of Coleridge. PART II. The Sun now rose upon the right: Out of the sea came he, Still hid in mist, and on the left Went down into the sea. And the good south wind still blew behind, But no sweet bird did follow, Nor any day for food or play Came to the mariners' hollo! And I had done a hellish thing, And it would work 'em woe: For all averred, I had killed the bird That made the breeze to blow. Was it inspired by an opium dream? Maybe. Was Coleridge really interrupted by a knock at the door from the "person from Porlock", who destroyed his train of thought so the poem remained unfinished? We'll probably never know for sure. But what we do know is that "Kubla Khan" is one of Coleridge's best-loved poems, admired for the richness of its exotic imagery and the delicious sound of its words. 5. "Christabel". Is the night chilly and dark? He is the author of, among others, The Secret Library: A Book-Lovers' Journey Through Curiosities of History and The Great War, The Waste Land and the Modernist Long Poem. Share this: Tweet.
